Boys & Girls Clubs can enable young people to become high-achieving students by incorporating academically beneficial activities--known as high-yield learning activities--into the Club's daily program schedule. The program features 5 main components: Homework help and tutoring, High-yield learning activities, Parent and adult involvement, Collaboration with schools, and Incentives. Through these 5 components, Clubs mobilize their resources to help children succeed in school. Boys & Girls Clubs completes an Intake and Outtake form to get a general idea of the student's current academic situation; in addition, the student's current academic level is identified, and an individualized instruction plan is developed. Parents and teachers are given many opportunities to receive student progress information.
